The painting, "Painted Funeral" is the second in a series of three works. All three deal with the rituals our culture holds on to as pinnacle moments of an individual's life. In the "Painted Funeral" the ritual is a metaphor for the end of an era. As we pass through rituals in our lives we become different, our roles change, a daughter becomes a mother, a son becomes a father. The painting is a representation, a picture of transition, the moment between ending and beginning.

EXHIBITIONS CONTINUED:

Student Independent Show 1985, 1984 (Multicraft Award for Drawing), 1983 (Minerva B. Johnson Award for Drawing), and 1982.
